

The House That Jack Built

PART IV

O me; O my; likewise, alack and alas! If there is anything that will reduce a woman to nervous jim-jammery and cerebral dunniness sooner than HOUSE-HUNTING; it has not yet been invented by the ENEMY of mankind.

Poor Jill is "all in" and Cupid couldn't hit a heart a yard away.

Total result of a week's "HOUSE-HUNTING":

- No. 1. Complete agreement between Jack and Jill regarding places "just rented."
- No. 2. Total disagreement regarding places that are still unrented.
- No. 3. Nervous prostration for Jill—grievous temptation to profanity for Jack.

They finally decide to put their case in the hands of a WISE real estate man who does the best POSSIBLE considering the limitations of the PAY ENVELOPE and the small but CONTINUOUS requirements of the furniture man.

Facis and Fancies About the Visiting Texas Sheriffs

Big Chief Lindsey.
THE gathering of sheriffs is the greatest collection of big men ever assembled in El Paso. To size up the peace officers six feet or better in height seems to be one of the requirements for selection to the chief executive office of the counties of Texas. Sheriff Lindsey of San Antonio gets the pup for height. He is five feet six—goodness gracious no six feet five in his low shoes, and he looks it. As a lightning rod he is there and the vice presidency, which means the presidency in 1912, may strike this tall elm of the San Antonio river. Who knows?

To be shot at semiannually has been one of the duties of Sheriff R. V. Watts, of Lufkin, Angellino county. This does not speak volumes for the marksmanship of Angellino county's citizens, but the presence of sheriff Watts, six feet two in his square toes, low cuts, has had the effect of driving most of the class A gun men out of Lufkin and its environs.

Disagreeable at Home.
Lots of men and women who are agreeable with others, get "cranky" at home. It's not your disposition, it's your liver. If you find in yourself that you feel cross around the house, little things worry you, just buy a bottle of Ballard's Herbine and put your liver in shape. You and everybody around you will feel better for it. Price 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

But they do not try any monkey-doodle business with Watts, sheriff of Lufkin, Angellino county. Just now he is doing some quiet smoking for a chap who started something he could not finish over and came to El Paso. He had better beat it or Watts of Lufkin will have him before he can say seat. As soon as the convention closes sheriff Watts is going to Florida to get a Texan who has the growing habit of marrying too many wives at one time. He has served several terms for it, but the sheriff is determined to teach him a lesson, so he is going over in the everglades country and bring him back to Lufkin for a legal paddling in the way of a penitentiary sentence.

Sheriff Watts is the most striking figure at the convention, baring Woody Townsend, with whom he would run a dead heat if Woody would guarantee not to ring in his two suits and summer clothes on R. V. Standing exactly six feet two and as straight as a soldier, the Lufkinite can be seen head and shoulders above the crowd. Like all tall men he prefers to stand rather than telescope himself into a dinky little chair, and he may be seen over against the southwest column in the chamber of commerce listening to everything that is going on and seeing everything with those gray-blue eyes which are the last pair of eyes in the world that one would care to look at down the business end of a six shooter barrel.

A man of the outdoors, sheriff Watts has the sun's print on his face and he looks as healthy as a queen's guard. He is an Elk, an Odd Fellow, and a member of the royal order of Princess Among Men. When the delegates started talking of not going to Cloudcroft because they could not reach it in time, sheriff Watts stepped forward and said: "I told them there was an undertaker's shop across the street handy and that they had better go over and count the coffins before they attacked the jail. The undertaker did not do the rush business he expected and I have been sheriff ever since."

County is 30-00 Miles.
Angellino county is 30 miles wide and 30 miles long, or 30 by 30, which ever it is. Watts has the figures on his tongue's end. It has a population of 30,000 good, hardworking, industrious folks who attend to their business and let the sheriff attend to his. The only trouble they have over there is with the tramps who blow in and out to work in the mills or on the farms.

Convention Clown.
Every convention, like every circus, must have a clown. Jake Giles is it at the sheriff's convention. Jake is that person who is right there Johnnie at the rat hole to second any and all motions that may be made and he can be depended upon to arise at the right moment and say: "Gentlemen, I move we adjourn until one o'clock in the morning." Nine o'clock means 9 o'clock. Jake is some cutup and when the convention picture was made Wednesday morning there was Jake as big as life and twice as natural right up in the front row with his grin as broad as Woody Townsend's Stetson.

Busy Young Woman.
Miss Kirk, the assistant secretary and treasurer of the association, is the busiest one present. If women were allowed to vote in Texas and she cared to run for office, she would poll the sheriff's vote solid. Her father, Capt. John B. Kirk, was one of the organizers of the association while he was deputy sheriff of Travis county, and has had the honor of presiding at the secretary's desk every year since that time. He is one of the striking personalities of the convention with his flowing white beard, the only full beard in the crowd. That is a sheriff R. V. Watts' little tribute to El Paso. He is from Lufkin, where he wears the official star of Angellino county. He is now serving his fourth term and is expected to be elected again by acclamation.

Ludsey of Bexar county. He is a friend of J. B. DuRose, formerly of Lufkin, who is showing him the skyscrapers and the alligators in the plaza pool.

Alderman a Worker.
W. S. Clayton, alderman and chairman of the reception committee of the sheriff's convention, has forgot business long enough to assist in entertaining the licensed gun toters.

Get His Job Before Park Pitman.
Cow puncher, frontiersman, terror of the horse-thieves and constable of Kemp, Kauffman county for 22 years, J. B. Duncan is here to attend the sheriff's convention. Besides these distinctions he is a native Texan and has had no opposition since the big wind.

Jenkins on the Job.
Chief Ben Jenkins is distributing the password among the sheriffs by which the peace officers can slip the patrolmen in case they, the sheriffs and not the patrolmen, get in trouble.

Don't Worry Koehl.
Sheriff La Four of Chambers county, is of French extraction. Robert Koehl is German and proud of it. These two men, both as big as a skinned horse, are renewing acquaintances at the convention. Sheriff La Four has had a murder in his county since he left home, but he is not worrying, as he is here for a good time. He is letting his deputies do the worrying while he is away.

A Hall Sympathizer.
A. R. Anderson, sheriff of Harris county and vice president of the association, like our own sheriff Hall, has a contest on in his county. He was defeated for re-election by 21 votes and says he knows where he can throw out 60 votes. He is to be the next president of the association, and brought his daughter, Miss Edna Anderson, with him to help him share the honors.

Bigger Than Tan.
Of all the big men at the convention, and believe Johnathan there are some whoopers here, sheriff A. Loesch, of Fayette county, is the prize winner. He had to go through the door of the chamber of commerce office sideways, and he has difficulty in getting in and out of the Sheldon elevators. He is not fat. He is just naturally big like the side of a furniture car, or the rear end of a circus wagon. He has been running for sheriff for so long that folks down at Lagrange have given up trying to overtake him, and he has been elected without opposition for the past 14 years.

Koehl's Mustache.
The finest drop stitch mustache at the gathering of Texas sheriffs is owned by Robert Koehl, of Wharton, Wharton county, Texas. It is as black as the raven's wing and as impressive as a title hat on Judge Magoffin.

Townsend's Seersucker Suit.
Woody Townsend has two suits as he is the president of such a great organization as the T. S. A. When he arrived Monday morning he wore a seersucker suit. Tuesday he opened the convention in a linen suit that looked as cool as a mint julep. Capt. Townsend, everyone calls him "captain," is everywhere at the same time, shaking hands with the delegates and swapping stories with Judge Goggin and his other El Paso friends.

Where to Find a Sheriff.
For anyone in the sheriff's department this week call 430 Bell. Deputies Greet, Bryant and Franco have transferred their headquarters to the chamber of commerce this week and are doing their share and sheriff Hall's part to entertain the visitors.

Miss Kirk Ever Present.
Miss Lydia Kirk, daughter of secretary John P. Kirk, of the association, knows all about sheriff's conventions, for she attends them all with her father, who is the permanent secretary and treasurer. Their home is in Austin, although Miss Kirk spends a portion of her time in Chicago.

Runs in the Family.
Sheriff Walton comes from a family of sheriffs. His father was sheriff of Bee county for 20 years and later Brewster county. Sheriff Walter, Jr., is now serving his first term and has been nominated for another term.

Woman Sheriff.
Mrs. E. M. Mobley, wife of sheriff Mobley of Howard county, says she is a state official. She assists her husband in the work of collecting the taxes of Howard county. They live in the big house at Big Springs and have many talents.

The Buss Buzzer.
J. E. Wilson is from Beeville, Bee county, which is in a bee line from Cuero. But to prove the old adage true there is not a bee in Beeville, no sir, nary a buzzer. The town and county was named after Gen. Bee, who fought at the battle of Something or Other.

Moore and Moore.
Sheriff T. L. Moore of Mineola, Wood county, was accompanied to the convention by Mrs. Moore, who is attending all of the sessions.

Helps to Receive.
Jack Dawson, as a member of the reception committee, is assisting secretary Kirk in caring for the delegates.

He Wears a Uniform.
W. L. Salts is sharing honors with chief Jenkins of the police department. Chief Salts is at the head of the Brennan police department. He has been
